

An executive decision may force stations to air a one sided politically charged documentary just days before a critical election in this country. This is a clear example of the dangers of media consolidation.

There is a moral and legal obligation to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get what promotes the special interests of these controlling corporations rather than what we need to support public interests and promote democracy.

Sinclair's actions show why we need to strengthen media ownership rules, not weaken them. Sinclair's actions demonstrate why the license renewal process must involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
